

Scottish Blind Golf Society

The driving force behind blind golf in Scotland since 1982

The Scottish Blind Golf Society was established over 30 years ago, providing help for blind and partially sighted people around Scotland. The main aim is to encourage a sporting activity, with the benefits that these bring, for people who have encountered sight loss.

We have members of all ages and varying golfing abilities. There are social events, serious competitions and even an annual Ryder Cup style battle with the Auld Enemy as we put together a 12 player Scotland team. We organise many types of events with fun days and player/guide competitions. Our Society is a registered Scottish charity, recognised and supported by the R & A.

Having a sight problem doesn't make golf out of bounds!

If you would like to find out more about SBGS, become a member or volunteer your sighted help, you can get in touch with us via the contact information below. Check out the SBGS website to get a flavour of the range of events and activities of the society. The Gallery section will also give you a snapshot of the members in action. There is also information in the "How To Join" section about becoming a member or a volunteer guide. A short, award winning film with the title, "A Bunch Of Gentlemen", can be seen on You Tube.
